the last few months, two separate reports have surfaced, suggesting that the FSB, Russia's primary intelligence agency, might have been actively working against the United States. According to the first report from The FSB, released during a conference of the Russian Parliament on July 17, the FSB was investigating allegations that a former American citizen, Anna Chapman, had worked for the Russian intelligence service, and had helped it install secret listening devices inside the building of the National Security Council in Washington, in an attempt to intercept conversations involving U.S. dignitaries. The FSB's investigation concluded that the American indeed worked at the NSC for a period of three weeks in October 2006. The FSB says she left for Russia in May 2007. According to FSB sources, special equipment had been installed in the area that provides access to the NSC's secure conference rooms, which is not accessible to the public. Yet even this is not the most shocking aspect of the story. A part of the FSB report mentioned a secret meeting with Chapman's boyfriend, a Russian intelligence agent and a man known as Igor Victorovich. The report goes on to say that, during that meeting, the FSB's men requested the information they had about Chapman from her boyfriend. The FSB says that the boyfriend had initially told them that he had worked for the National Security Council in Russia, in a call center. He told them she worked there for about a month.

But when the FSB mentioned that her job had ended more than two months before, the boyfriend told them that she was fired. Their conversation ended with the boyfriend asking them what they would do if she had been working for Russia's intelligence services and had not been fired. The FSB says, after that meeting, they came to the conclusion that they could not exclude the possibility that Chapman had been working for the FSB all along. And the contacts they found on her laptop led them to believe that she was very careful about protecting her identity. The second report, released by RT, a Russian news service, reports that during the January 2009 inauguration of Barack Obama, a Russian agent who has ties to the FSB attempted to kill him with a handgun. According to RT's source, whose identity is not disclosed, the FSB had called their contact

Avis aux militants: quand on réclame la gratuité et la caisse du travail, il faut aler en avant les questions de dégradation des services, de répression, de discrimination du travail Les CSP+, par exemple, sont en fait un moyen d'entreprise à la fois pour les défavorisés et pour les moyens plus privilégiés, un moyen d'accéder aux droits de la loi et des institutions, un moyen de contester les injustices sociales et une alternative de justice. La gratuité des soins est un avantage par rapport aux services publics. La caisse du travail est un avantage par rapport à l'impôt. On sait que les services publics sont gratuits pour l'ensemble du monde. Il est certain que l'abolition de la Caisse ouvrirait la porte à un tribunal, mais dans le même temps, on verrait se développer les forces de la solidarité intertribale. USS LST-759/LST-820 was a United States Navy used in the Asiatic-Pacific theater during World War II. As with many of her class, the ship was not named and is properly referred to by her serial number. Construction LST-759 was laid down on 10 November 1942, at the Brown Shipbuilding Co., Houston, Texas; launched on 6 January 1943; and commissioned on 31 January 1943, Lieutenant Commander C. W. Tutt, USNR, in command. Service history During World War II, LST-759 was assigned to the Asiatic-Pacific theater and participated in the following operations: the Palau Islands invasions (15 February - 10 March 1944), the Ulithi invasion (8 March 1944), and the Leyte landings (19 October 1944). On 20 January 1945, LST-759 returned to San Francisco, California, after loading troops and equipment at Seattle, Washington. During February 1945, LST-759 made a supply run to

Okinawa. On 29 July 1945, LST-759 departed the Leyte Gulf and, on 9 August 1945, arrived at Guam, Marianas Islands. She remained in the Marianas until 16 September 1945, when she sailed to Ulithi, Caroline Islands. On 28 September, she headed for the Philippines and arrived at San Pedro Bay, Leyte, on 11 October. LST-759 operated in the Philippine Islands until 5 December 1945, when she sailed back to San Pedro Bay, Leyte. On 6 December, she got underway to proceed via Pearl Harbor to the United States West Coast. At the end of the war, LST-759 was decommissioned on 27 February 1946, and struck from the Naval Vessel Register on 2 March 1946. On 1
